6. What was the best about the course?

What was the best about the course?

- the content and fresh perspectives it gave, while being relevant and uptodate with current affairs
- I liked the literature we read
- Jag tycker att Isaac Taylor var en bra och pedagogisk föreläsare
- Everything together
- The topic and how it was presented.
- Taylor was a great lecturer with passion and interesting material
- The seminars!
- Isaac's learning approach is relaxed and the space felt open for questions and opinions. Thanks for great pedagogical skills!
- Good literature
- I like it because it is so much in contrast to my ordinary studies. I like the discussions
- I believe Isaac skillfully introduces philosophical concepts and encourages engagement through interactive voting and discussions in breakout rooms. The chosen readings were adequate for understanding the concepts and were not overly dense.
- Materials were provided and professors were great
- Course content and the structure around it. The lectures, and the way they are structured around the topic and conducted via Zoom - including Q&A etc. Good support overall.
- Very well structured, meaningful seminars, rarely ever any doubt regarding what was expected and the overall information shared, and skilled seminar leaders.
- Good with no attendance and no assignment hand-in, especially no group assignments. In similar courses, group assignments has proven impossible since people participate with a great variety in how important it is to pass a course.

7. What improvements would you suggest?

What improvements would you suggest?

Have little longer time with the exam

Att lektionerna spelas in så man kan se på dem igen i efterhand

Nothing

The seminars were not very helpful as some of the facilitators did not add any guidance or directions to our discussions. I wish the seminars would be used to teach us and demonstrate how to build a good argument in philosophy (rather than just having us discuss among ourselves).

I would like the more content on the opposition to the general accepted arguments. Also, I would prefer that the exam would cover elements from the main book

Remake the seminars. They would work if we were to attend in person but online they gave me nothing.

As a full time employee, recorded lectures would help.

As a full time employee, an exam time where exam time was allocated on the weekend would be great. Sunday-Wednesday or Thursday-Sunday would had been great

More interaction in lectures, more discussion... more facilitation and less plain talk

I found the course both interesting and challenging. However, I struggled to fully take in the literature within the short time frame. I would have needed more time to process the readings properly, so it would be very helpful if the PowerPoint presentations were a bit more detailed — that way, I could revisit them afterwards.

What really helped me was the seminars. I truly appreciated them - they gave me a chance to explore my thoughts, reflect with others, and deepen my understanding of the content. They were also really enjoyable!

None

Nothing, in particular.

I am uncertain if Tännsjö's book on global democracy serves as the most suitable foundation for this course, primarily because I disagree with his perspective. There may be other philosophical principles that could be more effective.

A quick course that helped with learning of a subject that I'm not completely familiar with. Have therefore nothing significant to suggest.

Messaging function in the chat being not open made it very formal and hard to get any class feel, so to speak. Maybe mandatory video sharing and discussions with the raised hand function could be added?
